INTRODUCTION

Because competition for limited Federal resources is keener than ever before, it is necessary to make the optimum use of the resources we have. Agency Training Centers for Federal Employees and the Commission's other training resource documents, the Interagency Training Programs Bulletins and calendars, and the directory of Off-Campus Study Centers are designed to facilitate the economical and effective use of training resources on a Government-wide basis.

Agency Training Centers for Federal Employees is intended to provide management and training officials throughout the Federal Government with up-to-date information on agency-operated training centers. It also provides information on the number and variety of programs offered at these centers and on the general characteristics of these valuable resources for the training of Federal civilian employees.

For the purposes of this directory, agency training centers are defined as having:

- * A separate entity or identifiable organization,
- * A specific budget allotment or fund control,
- * A curriculum or series of courses offered on a continuing basis,
- * A specific manpower ceiling or staff complement.

Federal agencies establish and operate their own training centers in order to:

- (1) provide Federal civilian employees with agency-oriented training programs on a continuing basis,
- (2) provide necessary training for occupations unique to the Federal service,
- (3) supplement training provided through other resources of the agency or through interagency or non-Government facilities,
- (4) achieve economies by using agency equipment, facilities and staff, and by reducing tuition and travel costs and time away from the job.

The oldest established agency training center for Federal employees is the National Bureau of Standards Graduate School, which began operations in 1908. The number of centers increased slowly over the years until 1958, when the passage of the Government Employees Training Act facilitated establishment of training centers to meet the growing and changing training needs of the Federal service. Eleven years later, in Fiscal Year 1969, the number of agency training centers has risen from 20 to 112. Centers located in 35 states, the District of Columbia, the Canal Zone, and Europe were operated by 21 agencies and departments and staffed by 2,167 instructors and top administrative staff. (See Tables 1 and 2, and Figure 1.) The number trained and operating costs rose markedly from Fiscal Year 1968 to Fiscal Year 1969: 96,639 to 156,361 participants, a 61% increase; $19,696,218 (adjusted figure FY 68) to $28,521,072 in training costs, a 45% increase. (See Table 3 and Figure 2.)

The goal of all agencies is effective, economical utilization of training facilities throughout the Federal service. It cannot be achieved without a high degree of cooperation and willingness to share on the part of all agencies. Many agencies have the opportunity and desire to share training resources as shown by the significant percentage of employees from other agencies (4%) and outside Government (14%) trained at agency centers in Fiscal Year 1969. Agencies are encouraged to investigate the possibilities for further sharing their resources for increasing the availability of their training programs, and for sharing their experiences and expertise in the operation of such programs with agencies contemplating the establishment of training centers. Agencies which do not have sufficient resources or trainees to justify establishing a center of their own, but believe that a center would be of value to them in meeting organizational needs, should explore the possibility of combining their resources with those of other agencies in order to establish jointly-operated training centers which would fulfill their similar training requirements.

Agencies operating training centers not listed in this directory are urged to submit full reports through their agency headquarters in Fiscal Year 1970. Information and advice on establishing agency training centers may be obtained from Bureau of Training, at the Civil Service Commission, 1900 E Street, NW., Washington, D. C. 20415. (632-5660) Assistance in setting up training centers is also given by Directors of Civil Service Commission Regional Training Centers listed on page 8.
